Since this application is eligible for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, the finality of the previous Office action has been withdrawn pursuant to 37 CFR 1.114. Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1- 12, 14-15, 17- 32 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Newman et al (4,424,806) in view of Warwick et al (4,838,263). As for claim 1, Newman et al teaches a pneumatic chest compression vest comprising a front panel 30 having a central bib portion and side portions (figure 1), a flexible air bladder 30, 32, air port 48, belts 34, 36 for positioning the front panel 30 over a patient's chest. Warwick et al teaches oscillatory chest compression apparatus with shell 14, bladder 16, plural air ports . On lines 62- 68 (column 4) and lines 1-2 (column 5) , Warwick et al teaches that shell 14 maybe made of rigid material or having pockets with rigid plates so that the expansion forces of the bladder are directly inwardly against the chest of the patient to concentrate the forces and prevent the vest from expanding outwardly. In view of the teaching of Warwick et al, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to provide plural airports and rigid front panel for the vest of Newman et al to concentrate the forces inwardly against the patient's chest. As for claim 11, 17, note figure 1 of Newman et al. As for claims 5 -6, note that Newman et al teaches substantially the recited dimensions, and the provision for the exact dimensions is well within the realm of one of ordinary skill in the art, and does not provide any unobvious result, and therefore is not patentable over prior art . It is obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to provide dimensions which are within the range of the size of the average person. As for claims 10, 18, any conventional material used to make up the vest based on its well-known properties would have been an obvious provision. As for claims 19 – 22, note the comments above relative to claims 1-12, 14- 15, 17 -18. As for claims 23 – 24, 26 – 32, note that the device of Newman et al and Warwick et al teaches the recited steps for mounting and using the device. As for claim 25, crossing the shoulder straps in front of the vest is a conventional way of securing the vest to provide both vertical restraining forces as well as lateral restraining forces. This provision does not provide any unobvious result, and therefore is not patentable over prior art.

Art Unit: 3764

Claims 13, 16, 33 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Newman et al (4,424,806) in view of Warwick et al (4,838,263), and further in view of Akerman et al (2,588,192).

As for claim 13, Akerman et al teaches an air bladder with a width of about 21 inches (figure 3) . In view of the teaching of Akerman et al, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to provide the air bladder of Newman et al with a width of about 21 inches to fit a wearer. The provision for the exact dimensions is well within the realm of one of ordinary skill in the art, and does not provide any unobvious result, and therefore is not patentable over prior art . It is obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to provide dimensions which are within the range of the size of the average person. As for claims 16, 33, note the suspenders 17, 18 of Akerman et al. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to provide the device of Newman et al with suspenders to further secure the device to a wearer.

Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 1- 33 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.
